Not illustrated. 1896 Excerpt: . . . pensions, and interest, leaving a net gain for 1894 of 1, 940, 590. 71. This very excellent balance sheet js largely due to the reduced prices of material and supplies, as, for example, the prices paid for steel rails per ton in 1874, 1884, and 1894, respectively, was 84. 88, 27. 02, and 24. 41; likewise, the price of coal per ton in these years was 3. 37, 1. 43, and 1. 24, respectively. I regret that there seems to be an error in my report published in Special Consular Reports, Vol. XII, P-16, entitled Highways of Commerce, so far as regards the figures relative to Belgian railways. The only explanation must be in the misstatement by my authority of the facts therein given. The statistics mentioned ia this present report are drawn directly from the report of the Belgian Minister of Railways, Posts, and Telegraphs...
