Here s the scenario: Everyone simply knew him as Harold, one of the many street people who wandered through Las Vegas. He was seemingly a harmless, homeless person who elicited a smile and a muffled laugh whenever he was around - or so people thought. No one would ever have imagined what would be found when he met an untimely end, hit by a speeding sportscar in front of the Labachio Hotel and Casino while a shocked entourage of erstwhile pseudo-entrepreneurs looked on in disbelief. That s when the preconceived perceptions of Harold went through a traumatic transformation. For, as police investigated, they discovered that looks are deceiving, and that Harold was more than a mere avenue...
