This Naval War College Newport paper, Sailing New Seas, presents the ideas of one of the Navys most senior leaders. Admiral Reason's topic is the course the United States Navy should steer in the typhoon of change characterizing today's and tomorrow's world. He begins by describing what the technological, managerial, and social hurricane of the Information Age means for warriors who go to sea. He then addresses, in general terms and in specifics, the response such an upheaval requires. While acknowledging the traditions that made the Navy great, Admiral Reason proposes a new way to think about the fleet as a whole, one that discards the industrial age model in favor of the flight deck paradigm of a high-performance organization operating at the edge of chaos. He concludes by stressing the importance of rapid adaptability to the Navys paramount measure of performance—warfighting. This is an insightful blending of the implications of the trans-industrial age to future warfare, the criticality of data, the relevance of an extraordinary naval model of leadership, and the requirement for a new mind-set in...
