The most of the experience in construction work that I have had was in the District of Columbia, where I was assistant to the Engineer Commissioner, in charge, among other things, of the division of building and construction throughout the District, and principally, in addition to that, the special charge, by presidential appointment, of the construction of the new District Building of the District of Columbia. Mr. Stevens. How long were you in charge of the construction of that building? Major Harding. Four and one-third years. Mr. Stevens. When were you relieved, and when did you come down here? Major Harding. I was relieved the latter part of July, 1907, and reported for duty to the chairman of the commission on the 2d of August, 1907. Mr. Stevens. Then you have been here nearly one and one-half years in charge of that part of the work?...
